

A very colourful word for all seasons

It's one of our most used and versatile words.

By its stress and inflection it can describe many emotions and has so many grammatical usages. It can be used as a noun (I couldn't give a fuck), as an adjective (it's a fucking beauty), as a verb in its transitional form (he well and truly fucked it up), and it can indicate a state of being in the present tense (I'm completely fucked) and in the future tense (well, I'll be fucked).

Many everyday expressions show its true versatility.

Denial = I didn't fucking do it. Perplexity = I know fuck all about it.

Inquiry = What the fuck do you think you're doing?

Panic = Let's get the fuck out of here. Directions = Fuck off

Apathy = Who gives a fuck anyway? Criticism = He fucks everything up.

Amazement = That's fucking incredible. Resignation = Oh fuck it.

Disbelief = How the fuck did you do that?

Greetings = How the fuck are you? Suspicion = Who the fuck are you then?

The word has been used by some very notable people through-out history, some of the more memorable quotes being:

"What the fuck was that?" - The Mayor of Hiroshima.

"Look at all those fucking Indians" - General Custer.

"Where the fuck is all that water coming from?" -Captain of SS Titanic.

"That's not a real fucking gun" - John Lennon.

"The fucking throttle's stuck" - Sir Malcolm Campbell.

"No fucker will ever find out" - Richard Nixon.

"Heads are going to fucking roll for this" - Anne Boleyn.

"Who let that fucking woman drive?" - Captain of the Space Shuttle.

"Watch him. He'll have some fucker's eye out" – King Harold.

"Any fucking idiot should understand that" – Albert Einstein.

"It does fucking look like her" - Pablo Picasso

"How the fuck did you work that one out?" – Pythagoras.

"You want WHAT on the fucking ceiling?" - Michaelangelo

"I don't suppose it's fucking raining" - Joan of Arc.

"Scattered showers my fucking arse" – Noah.

"Fucking Hell" - The Devil.

"How fucking long?" - Chief Architect - Great Wall of China.

"I thought I could smell fucking petrol" – Nikki Lauder.

"Why? Because it's fucking there, that's why" – Sir Edmund H